THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA TOURIST OFFICE, 17 CASTLEREAGH STREET, SYDNEY 2000

Chairman's Message

Countdown 98 has begun. In addition to focusing our energy on qualifying the Coca-Cola Socceroos for the World Cup every game we play is vital to the position of the Coca-Cola Socceroos in the FIFA World Rankings. The more games we are able to play improves our ranking and in turn our position in the World Cup draw when we qualify.

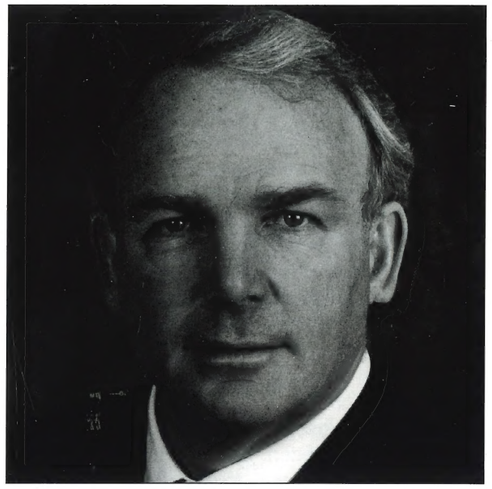
We welcome to our shores, for the first of the 12 projected home Internationals, our friendly rivals, Japan. It is appropriate that we should meet this year, which is an Olympic anniversary, as we first played them during the days of our full amateurism in the 1956 Olympic Games which were held in Melbourne.

We have met on numerous other occasions in a common ambition to produce teams of World Cup standard and Japan is aiming at hosting the Soccer World Cup in the year 2002.

The two matches are also being played on grounds which have not previously had the privilege of hosting international matches of this level. The first match at Brandon Park will give the people of Wollongong the chance to view soccer at one of the highest levels. This will be followed by breaking ground at the new Bob Jane Stadium in Melbourne.

Our enthusiasm is not only for the Coca-Cola Socceroos but we have demonstrated with the Coca-Cola Olyroos that our prospects are excellent for progression to the Olympic Games in Atlanta. The road is hard and the opposition to be met will be much stronger than the Oceania elimination tournament.

Further development amongst our junior teams is always to the forefront and we anticipate great things in the future.



None of this would be possible without the support of our sponsors. Soccer Australia is supported by numerous sponsors who have been of enormous benefit to soccer in Australia. We express our gratitude particularly to the Coca-Cola Company, the Australian Sports Commission, Ericsson Australia, Ansett Australia, Optus Communications, addidas, and United Distillers (Johnnie Walker). Their support is essential to our future success.

Finally we would like to express Soccer Australia's appreciation of all the supporters of the Coca-Cola Socceroos and Coca-Cola Olyroos. They have come out in force for all the national team's matches over the past years. This vital component is essential for the growth of Australian soccer.

David Hill
Chairman, Soccer Australia

Japan Football Association

It is a pleasure as always to welcome, again, to these shores the Japan Football Association with whom much of our soccer history runs in parallel.

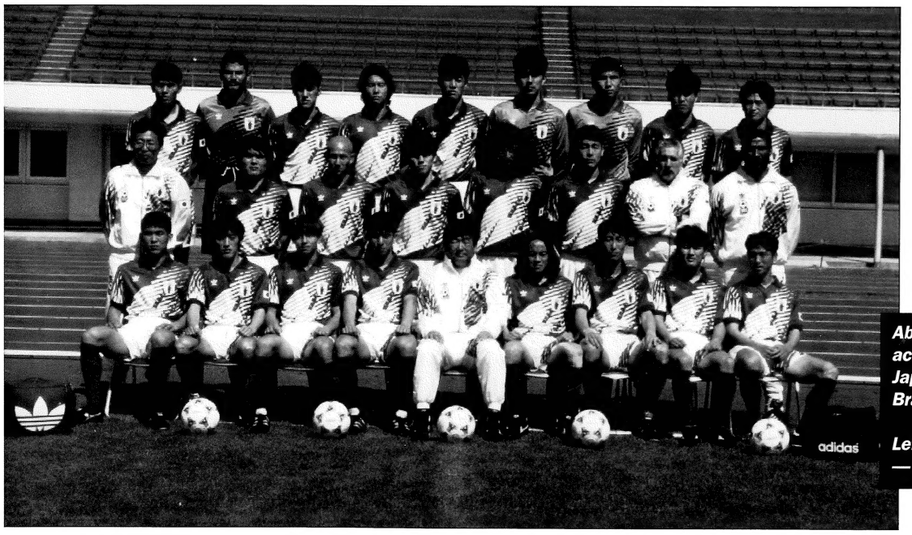
The origins of Japanese football are said to date back to 1873 when the game was introduced by an Englishman, Lieutenant Commander Douglas.

However, unlike Australia, it wasn't until 1921 that Japan formed a league. Equally it was only 15 years later in 1936 when Japan sent its National team to the Olympic Games in Berlin. They scored an upset victory over Sweden. By 1964 they were able to produce another unexpected result, though much deserved, when they reached the quarter-finals of the Tokyo Olympic Games in 1964.

To prove that the development was continuing, the Japanese team won the bronze medal at the Mexico Olympic Games in 1968.

Like Australia, Japanese Football was completely amateur and it was only the introduction of the famous J-League and professionalism which began the real upsurge, and the determination to host a World Cup in the year 2002. This upsurge in interest was not only confined to the domestic soccer scene, but the national stadium is filled each year with an excess of 60,000 supporters, usually a sell-out, for the Toyota Cup, a match held to determine the number one club team in the world. Capacity crowds have also been achieved for various visiting clubs from overseas. As always, a lot of the progress hinges on the development on the youth of the country and as each year goes by more and more junior teams are being filled and are vying for positions which will eventually lead them into the national team.

Australia have now played Japan on nine occasions for one win to Japan, four draws and four wins to Australia. The teams first met at the Melbourne Olympic Games on 27 November 1956 when Australia were victorious by 2 goals to nil. It was not for another 12 years that the teams met again in a friendly series played in Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide. This series was shared with one win to each of the countries and a 2-all draw in Sydney.



Above: Kazuyoshi Miura, Japanese ace striker who has returned to Japan after playing professionally in Brazil and Italy's Serie A.

The Japanese Football Association points out that it has in excess of 18,000 women players and they have already played many international matches. Japan's aim is to be become in the shortest possible time one of the world's leading soccer nations which will further assist them in their application to hold the World Cup in Japan in the year 2002.

The current visiting Japanese squad has many players who have travelled to Australia before, including Akita, Ihara, Moriyasu, Kitazawa, Kikuchi, Yamaguchi, Nakamura and Yanagimoto.

It is particularly interesting to note that amongst the internationals the most capped is Masami Ihara with 82 appearances.

A New Direction for Australian Women's Soccer

AUSTRALIAN WOMEN'S SOCCER ASSOCIATION

Having narrowly missed out on qualification for next year's Atlanta Olympics, the focus of women's soccer's elite program is now directed towards the 1999 World Cup and, of course, the 2000 Olympics.

Two key components of the new direction are the Intensive Training Centre (ITC) Program and an extensive number of training camps and tours for the National Elite Squad.

Six ITCs have been established around Australia catering for players 15-20 years of age and other older players who have been included in the national squad. The objectives of the program are to identify future national team players at the same time as providing an elite training environment in their home state. The preliminary match, in Wollongong, sees two of the stronger states in women's soccer, NSW and the ACT, meet in what should be a close and exciting game.

During the week 11-15 February, a National Youth Squad will be in camp in Melbourne in preparation for the game against the Victorian State team. Whilst at the camp, players will undergo extensive training and sports science testing, educational lectures and a number of games – all designed to assist the National Coach, Tom Sermanni, identify players for future national team activities and a possible tour to the United States in May/June.

All the above is made viable through financial support from the Australian Sports Commission and the Australian Olympic Committee through the Olympic Athlete Program, and the Australian Women's Soccer Association (AWSA) thanks them for their continued support.

The AWSA would also like to thank Soccer Australia, the Illawarra Soccer Association/ Wollongong Wolves Soccer Club and the Victorian Soccer Federation/South Melbourne Soccer Club for the assistance and co-operation received in the staging of these matches and we look forward to future ventures of a similar nature.

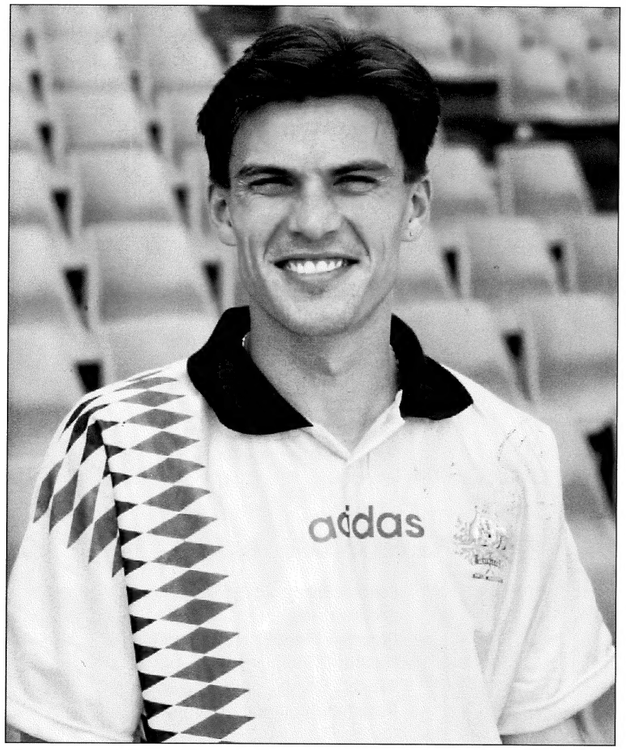
Milan Blagojevic: Star Quality

A handsome man who was runner-up in Cleo Magazine's Bachelor of the Year last year, Milan is equally described by national coach Eddie Thomson as a player who stands out in the Ericsson Cup like a sore thumb because of his enormous ability which will eventually take him back to soccer in Europe.



Some 25 years ago Dusan Blagojevic and his wife Ranka had to make a decision about their future when Mr. Blagojevic Snr. completed his compulsory Army service. The decision was to migrate to Australia with their two very young children, Rosa and Milan, and therefore their new life started in a hostel at Villawood in Sydney.

It was here young Milan, age one, started his life in Australia and went through a series of schools in that area in Villawood, Fairfield then onto Cabramatta before ending up at Cabramatta High School.

Always interested in sport, it was only when he turned 10 that he really seriously became interested in soccer, playing for his school and a club called Boys Boys. As his skills developed, he moved to the Avala club and played with the under-13's to the under-16's before reaching second grade and finally first grade at the age of 17.

Equipped with his Higher School Certificate, he moved to the University of Western Sydney to study a Business Degree. Fate, however, played its hand in his future education. His soccer ability carried him into the Australian Youth Team and he played in the qualifiers in Indonesia and Syria and Fiji before progressing to the monumental team which finally went to the Barcelona Olympics. Not having sufficient credit points to defer, he was forced to give up his academic career but in turn gained the honour of being one of a team which produced some of Australia's best results by coming fourth at the Barcelona Olympic Games.

He joined Apia-Leichhardt and was with them for two years but played three seasons because this was the time of the change-over from winter to summer soccer. He had a further season with Marconi-Fairfield in 1991-92.

While in Barcelona with the Coca-Cola Olyroos, he was approached, as were many other players, by scouts to sign European contracts. He did in fact sign to go to the lowly Belgium Club Ekeren. With hindsight this was a bad move. Firstly it was the first time that he was going to live away from home in a strange country without much knowledge of that country; more importantly, the style of soccer played by Ekeren in those days was completely different from what he had anticipated. The skills which he had been taught and developed were literally not required there and the type of soccer played was more robust and more of what was in the past been described as kick and rush.

After nine months at Ekeren, he realised that his future did not lie there and when he was approached to go to Holland he willingly agreed. However his first choice in Holland had an immediate change of management and policy and therefore that transfer was unsuccessful. He was quickly picked up by Heerenveen Club in Holland to whom he is still under contract.

Once again, fate stepped in and he was plagued by a number of serious injuries including two complete knee reconstruction operations. His popularity with the Heerenveen Club was confirmed when the Australian National Team went on tour to Holland and Canada and he again met up with their officials. They, however, realised that he needed further time before coming back to them and allowed him to return to play in Australia.

He played the 1994-95 season with Heidelberg in Victoria prior to returning to live with his family at home and play with UTS Olympic. As a part-time professional, he also works as a Cable-TV technician but neither soccer nor his trade prohibits him from enjoying his tennis and golf and watching videos and movies while saving for his marriage to his fiancée, Malina.

He has already represented his country on nine occasions after making his debut against South Korea in 1991. He is dedicated as a player who intends to gain his happiness and his living, particularly as he is now getting married, from soccer. There is no doubt that he will return to Heerenveen but we also hope that has the opportunity to continue his career in Australia with his friends in the national soccer squad.

Eddie Thomson in familiar pose — off the bench and on his feet.

A Talk with Eddie Thomson

Despite some minor hiccups the tournament for the Oceania region is complete with Australia qualifying for the next stage. We took this opportunity to talk to Eddie Thomson about the progress, in general, of soccer in Australia and the preparation for the future.

We first discussed the fact that the Coca-Cola Olyroos did not meet tough competition despite losing the final match to New Zealand by one goal to nil. In fact the Coca-Cola Olyroos scored some 50-odd goals and only conceded 2. We asked Eddie about this and what we should do and he pointed that there were problems in Asia, who have just taken into their competition the new Russian States. Having so many countries, they're not basically interested in Australia. It really therefore boils down to the fact of having to try and make the most of Oceania and just be the big fish in the small pond. For Oceania they have to play more games and more international games, friendly international games, to raise the standard of the competition. For the Coca-Cola Olyroos the point is to make all concerned realise that the competition will only get tougher and in no way can they be complacent about the standard of football required in the recent Oceania Elimination Series.

We then posed the question of how we in Australia can gain the experience for the Coca-Cola Olyroos to ensure that we not only maintain but improve our levels. Eddie Thomson's view is that, between now and Atlanta, we must try and arrange games against teams like Japan and Korea who are both excellent Olympic sides. We did this last time before we went to Barcelona. We went to Korea first and played two games and hopefully we can do the same again this time. Last time Japan visited here they brought their Olympic side and that was very good because it gave the fringe players the benefit of playing and a chance for us to look at one or two players who have since come into the team. Equally, matches will be arranged against stronger clubs, hopefully both at home and abroad, and therefore our preparation should be good.

We next asked whether it would be sensible, as the Coca-Cola Socceroos, we are now going to play Japan and Sweden to promote as many of the Coca-Cola Olyroos into the senior match to gain top experience. Eddie's response was that international jerseys do not come easily, and have to be earned. There will be four from the Olympic team picked in the Coca-Cola Socceroos' squad because they are deserving of the honour and as individual players raise their standards they will all be considered for selection.

We proceeded to discuss the level of Australian Soccer to that of the rest of the world and Thomson feels that we are well advanced and could willingly hold our own at most levels from the 17 year olds up to the Coca-Cola Socceroos. The Coca-Cola Olyroos, due to the weakness of the Oceania Tournament, might be a little under done, but the commissioners are arranging for teams from Japan including Red Diamond. Extra fixtures are possible from teams who are qualifying for Atlanta in both Asia and Europe, who in turn will be looking to further enhance their own prospects. There will be ample opportunity for a large number of matches for further development.

We briefly talked about the Barcelona Olympics and the exodus overseas of a large quantity of Australian players. This is again seen as a strong possibility because of the development of players like Tiatto, Lozanovski and Spiteri, but that should not in any way affect future Australian representation by these players.

We raised the point of how the national coach felt about his success being copied by other sides in development and tactics and whether by maintaining these tactics they would become familiar to the opposition and thus be readily countered. Eddie pointed out that domestically the national team's tactics have been copied; and whereas they originally had Yankos style defence, when they changed it to bring Zelic in as a sweeper this was soon followed. As far as overseas and tactics becoming too familiar, development was constantly on the way here in Australia and though it might only be subtly noticed the changes and plans were equally constant and varied. Therefore over the past five years the style altered not only for the purposes that we raised but also to keep up with the times in World Soccer. By the very physical stature of our players we are able to develop a style which the Japanese or Koreans are unable to follow.

One of the essentials in selecting a style of play is that the players are capable of performing it but at the same time appreciate the different styles of, shall we say, Britain, Holland, Germany and Spain. They are all different, to say nothing of the styles put forward by the Americans. In other words, one has to be able to defend against those styles while utilising one's own style, in particular for attack.

Overall the situation is very healthy and the teams continue to improve. Gone are the days when teams picked themselves. Now one must contend for position.

Progress overall can be seen year by year, because when we played Japan last time in February 1995, that is the Coca-Cola Olyroos, six of that squad have now developed and are playing overseas.

Refereeing in Australia

The question of quality is raised in all sports when referring to arbitrators, referees or umpires . . . usually a very controversial subject.

It is absolutely essential for the development of Soccer in Australia that as much attention is paid to referees as players, from junior to international level, so that we can rank with the best in the world.

Soccer enjoys a huge level of support at junior level: over 500,000 players take to the field each weekend during the season. These matches are controlled by just over 5,000 referees and herein lies a problem.

Like all sports, worldwide, the ratio of players to referees is disproportionate. As a code we need more referees and we want them to be better at their job.

The Referees' Development Program of Soccer Australia is addressing the needs of referees at all levels. It provides for the recreational referee who just wishes to enjoy a weekend game of soccer right through to the international standard match official.

Specialist training programs are in place for future elite referees and linesmen as well as inspectors and coaches.

As Australia becomes more clearly established on the world stage the opportunities for our match officials will continue to expand. This will be coupled with an improved level of performance as the training opportunities for referees continue to evolve.

Jack Taylor, the great English referee who controlled the 1974 World Cup Final, said of his first game:

'I could not understand why anyone would want to go out there and be jeered and abused by the people who came to watch.'

But Taylor continued to referee. He continued to grow and develop.

This is the true story for all referees. Refereeing is about learning, about developing as a person. Not all referees can become FIFA referees but nearly all people can enjoy their time contributing to the game and developing as individuals.

Notwithstanding this, Gordon Dunster and Eugene Brazzle represented Australia as official Linesmen at the last World Cup tournament in America in 1994. They were given the honour of running the line more times than any other participants.

Too many of our ex-players retire from the game without considering the option of refereeing. It is not necessarily considered as an option and yet, for anyone, male or female from 14 years on, refereeing presents the opportunity to grace the playing fields of the world or to enjoy the pleasures of ensuring that younger players have the opportunity to enjoy a game of football.

Soccer Australia can provide you with the chance to enjoy another facet of our game; we can help you become a referee.

Just ring Gary Power on (02) 389 6099 and we'll help you take the first step.
